A Drowned Maiden's Hair is the second book I've read by this author, and both have been superb. Although the classification as YA or middle-grade fiction might be accurate in terms of the heroine's age, the novel is complex and intelligent enough to satisfy adult readers. The characterizations were multilayered and wonderfully believable.

A Drowned Maiden's Hair by Laura Amy Schlitz

A Drowned Maiden's Hair is a delightful find, an original story with an irresistible set of characters: a love-starved orphan, a trio of sisters who operate a seance business (much like the Fox Sisters), a deaf-mute servant, and a rich woman grieving for her lost child.

Excerpt: A Drowned Maiden's Hair. It was not until the Misses Hawthorne boarded the train that Maud was able to open her book. She had ridden in a train once before, when she left St. Anne's Children's Home for the Barbary Asylum, and she was glad of it, because it allowed her to assume the nonchalance of a world traveler.

A Drowned Maiden's Hair: A Melodrama is a brilliant example of how a very conventional Gothic story, with very traditional tropes can still be a damn good novel. This is an excellent Gothic melodrama, one that knows exactly that it is one and as such it
